This pedestal dish belongs to the Kinrande type of the late Ming dynasty. Kinrande is a Japanese word which means gold thread embroidered colored brocade. Kinrande porcelains have exquisite gilt paintings on monochrome white, green, blue, red or purple porcelains. Their shapes include bowls, pedestal dishes, winepots and vases. In addition to imitating the Japanese gold embroidered brocade, Japanese gold-painted white letter paper from the late Ming dynasty were also imitated. Kinrande porcelains were produced from the Jiajing period to the late Ming dynasty. They were exported to Northern Europe, Africa and South America at that time.
